Julie Westover began her career in music at age three, when she took her first piano lesson from her mother. She has studied for the past 20 years under several teachers, including Tanya Tkachenko and Jennifer Knelmen. She has been teaching piano since the age of thirteen and has successfully completed her ARCT Performer's in Piano. Currently she is pursuing a degree in music at York University with the intention of enrolling in teacher's college. She has a special interest in teaching young children and has developed a program especially for them.
